The schools may teach about religion from a historical, cultural, sociological or other educational perspective. Instruction about religion shall not promote nor denigrate the beliefs or customs of any religion or sect, nor should a preference be shown for one religious viewpoint over another. The Board expects that such instruction will identify principles common to all religions and foster respect for the diversity of religions and foster respect for the diversity of religions and customs in the world. ~~but must not favor the beliefs and customs of any particular religion or sect over any others in such teaching.~~

As appropriate for a particular course, teachers may objectively discuss the influences of various religions, using ~~Instructional programs may include references to religion and may use~~ religious literature, art, music or symbols to illustrate the subject matter being taught: their relationship with culture, literature or the arts. -Such instruction should be designed to broaden the students' understanding of social and cultural history, and their tolerance for the multiple ways of life practiced by the peoples of the world. Instruction about religious holidays shall be carefully tied to these educational objectives.

The Board recognizes the rights of all students to engage in private religious activity, individually or in groups. This may include reading of religious texts, religious discussions, and prayer.

Staff members shall be sensitive to their obligation not to interfere with the philosophical/religious development of each student, in whatever tradition the student embraces. Students may voluntarily pray at any time before, during or after the school day when not engaged in instruction or other school activities, subject to the same rules of order that apply to other student activities.

School-sponsored programs should not be, nor have the effect of being, a religious celebration.
